My speaking report

Asha | Oct 26, 2026, 10:30 AM

> Here is what to work on next.

Your plan for next time

1. Say these words slowly, in parts: reproduce.
2. Give longer answers: your main idea, a reason, then a real example.

Reading

- Went well: You read the whole passage.
- To fix: You skipped some parts of the passage.
  How to fix it: Follow the words with your eyes, and read every line to the end.
- To fix: Your pronunciation can be clearer. Some words were heard as other words.
  How to fix it: Speak a little slower, open your mouth, and say the end of every word. Say each word below slowly in parts, then in a sentence.
- Went well: Your reading speed was good (about 140 words a minute).
- You skipped: "which means making it happen again on purpose"
- Say these clearly: reproduce (re-pro-duce)

Conversation

- Question 2: "Why do you think repeating the problem matters so much?": This answer was short (3 words). You said: "Bug reports help"
  How to fix it: Say your main idea, give one reason, then give one real example. Try for three or four sentences.

> Instead of saying:
> "um I think basically a bug report is useful because it says what went wrong you know and the engineer can repeat it"
> Say it like this:
> "I think a bug report is useful because it says what went wrong and the engineer can repeat it."

Your words

- Filler words: 3 filler words: "um" x1, "basically" x1, "you know" x1. Most were in question 1.
- Went well: No clear wrong words found.

Face and body

The camera was off. Turn it on at the start of your next session to get feedback on how you look and sit.